Trinity Congratulates Ken Friesenhahn for Receipt of the Certified Compliance and Regulatory Professional® certification

DALLAS, Texas (April 25, 2017) – Kenneth Friesenhahn, Compliance Manager at Trinity Real Estate Solutions, recently earned the Certified Compliance and Regulatory Professional credential from the Lubin School of Business at Pace University partnering with the Association of International Bank Auditors (AIBA).

Designed as a 26-module comprehensive program, the Certified Compliance and Regulatory Professional (CCRP) credential is led by veteran compliance professionals from the world's leading financial institutions, licensed organizations, and top-level academics. The extensive Program stresses the rigorous content demands in the compliance field, corporate governance and regulatory affairs while directly learning from accomplished Subject Matter Experts.

"Obtaining the CCRP designation is a major accomplishment, and I applaud Kenneth's commitment and hard work," says Brad Meyer, CEO and President of Trinity Real Estate Solutions. "Those who receive this advanced certification equip themselves with additional expertise and provide insight in understanding the current maze of compliance and regulatory issues. With this certification, Trinity's ultimate goal is to add value to the financial institutions we serve while accommodating and partnering with our customers and vendors."

Mr. Friesenhahn is responsible for analyzing and reviewing business policy and procedures while proactively offering business council and advice to ensure compliance with all ongoing regulations. He also ensures appropriate communication with both internal and external business partners and implements modifications to business policies, processes and procedures. In addition to serving as Trinity's Compliance and Quality Manager, Kenneth is a licensed attorney and spent over a decade working at the Texas legislature.
